I AM DYING.
The following beautiful poem is taken from the Memphis Bulletin. It is rarely we find such contributions to the columns of a newspaper. It is sweetly, beautifully said:

Raise my pillow, husband, dearest,
And then I shall sleep peacefully,
Must I know, by those of earth,
That I am dead, my darling?
I am happy, my dear, strong hand,
Yours that ever has sustained me
To the borders of this land.

Per your God and mine—our Father
Thence shall lead me on,
Where upon a throne eternal
Sits the loved and only Son.
I've had visions and been dreaming
Of the land of joy and glory,
Year by year I've wandered backward,
Till I was a child again.

Drans of grief, and the moment
When I stood your wife and child—
How my heart filled with love's triumph,
In the hour of woman's pride.
Drans of these and all the earth's charms
Furnish me no more of joy,
Oh, the heart is being anguish,
When first I knew that we must part.

It has passed, and God has promised
All my future to attend;
He that is more than friend or brother,
He'll be with me to the end.
Leading me to the portals of glory,
Clothed in his robe of glory,
And he'll be with me to the end.

When life's trials wait around thee,
And its chilling billows swell,
Think! think! heaven that I'm spared
To thee.
Bring me back that "all is well."
My last blessing let them keep—
But they're sleeping, do not wake them—
They'll learn soon enough to weep.

Tell them often of their mother,
Kiss them for me when they wake;
Lead them gently in life's pathway,
Love them doubly for my sake.
Clasp my hand still closer, darling,
This the last night of my life,
For to-morrow I shall never
Answer when you call me wife.

Fare thee well, my noble husband,
Faint not 'neath the chafing rod;
Throw your strong arms round our children,
Keep them close to thee—and God!

A HERO IN THE HOUR OF PERIL.
At about 9 o'clock on the night of Nov. 27th, when the British steamer Tinkling Star was about fifty miles from St. Nicholas Mole, the engineers discovered that the iron plates about midships, and in front of the paddle wheels, had been strained by the heavy seas which she was passing, and that large volumes of water were coming into the hold of the vessel through cracks on either side, below the water mark.

Some of the passengers were advised of this and, gradually the passengers and crew were overtaken by a panic, when there was a rush to the life boat. It was speedily lowered, and into it escaped the United States Consul of this port, Mr. Aaron Gregg, and several others. But the lowering of this boat was so badly managed, in the effort of every one to save himself, that the bow of the boat was elevated out of the water, while the stern was submerged in the form which left the paddle wheels, but they managed at last to cut the rope, and so disentangled themselves from the steamer.

No sooner was this life boat parted from the ship than a panic overtook the firemen and others who were on board, and the scene when the firemen took the furnaces, the oilmen the engines, the steward and the kitchen, and the captain took leave of his senses, was perfectly hellish.

The panic stricken crew, seeing that the life boat had left them, believed that the ship was about to part; and about to founder, and just at this critical moment, Thomas Lewis, the second engineer, and the only American citizen on board, seeing every port deserted and all hands flying into the jaws of death, rushed upon the deck, and with a voice of thunder and thrilling earnestness addressed himself to them.

"Hullo there! where are you, who call yourselves Englishmen? who fly from your stations when there is a little bit of danger, and call yourselves men? Come back to your places—I am not afraid! I'll stake my life, and back all I have, that I will take this vessel into port with perfect safety—if you but do your duty." The turning to the captain, he said:

"You cap, you've lost your head, and a lowed these cowardly fellows—these lazy land-lubbers, who call themselves English, to take your senses from you. Go up to your place on the hurricane deck and order the wheelman back to his place." (Turning again to the firemen, who stood with their bags ready to quit the ship.)—Go back to places, and do your duty, and if we are to die, let us die like brave men and not as cowards! I am but a young man yet, and do you think I am going unnecessarily to risk my life? And I have a young wife and a little family in Jamaica, and do you think I am going to leave them to want? Not a bit of it. I mean to go back there, and not run away in a little emergency like this!

Then addressing Mr. Nathan, a solicitor, who was buckling on a life-belt, said: "Take that off, sir; not the slightest necessity for any nonsense of that kind. You stand by me, and everything will go well." And that little American citizen, Dr. Lewis, so inspired confidence into the whole panic-stricken crew, that they resumed their places, and carried the steamer successfully into the harbor of St. Nicholas Mole. I am informed by Mr. Nathan, a passenger, that had it not been for the courage and presence of this second engineer, the steamer must have been lost, whereas, the steamer was safely conducted into one of the best harbors in the world, without her cargo having been damaged to the extent of a single shilling. The cargo was valued at £12,000. The life-boat got into port a few hours after the steamer.

SAM PATCH.
The Elmira Gazette has recently published some extracts from a paper printed in that village forty years ago. The last number contains the following relating to Sam Patch, who made his last leap over the Genesee falls in Rochester, November 18, 1829.

October 12, 1829, Sam made a big leap from Biddle's stairway, at Niagara Falls. His success was announced in an extra, which appears in the Gazette of October 14th, and is as follows:

Whitney's Eagle Hotel, 4 1/2 o'clock.
Sam has just made his great jump. The day was lowery and rainy. However the number of 300 persons were assembled on the Island to witness the feat; the Canadian's crew was crowded. To view the platform erected for the fearless Patch from the Biddle Stairway it did not appear so grand, as the platform reached only about two thirds the height of the bank, but to descend to the margin of the water, in the gulf beneath, and there look up at the perpendicular ladder, made you imagine that it would require superhuman powers to accomplish such an enterprise. Sam ascended the ladder and remained on the top resting himself and adjusting himself for the leap, during which time he was repeatedly cheered by the spectators. At length he rose, every eye was bent intently on him, he waved his hand and kissed the star spangled banner that floated gracefully over his head, and precipitated himself like an arrow into the flood below! 'Twas a matchless and tremendous leap! He very soon re-appeared and swam to the shore with great ease. Then it was that a painful and unpleasant yet indescribable sensation was driven from each breast, by the flood of joy which succeeded on seeing that he was safe. Then it was that the benumbing spell which had reigned a moment or two from the time he rose on the platform, was broken by the voices of congratulation—all rushed forward—who were below—to take the jumping hero by the hand; and the intrepid Sam spoke to the first: "There is no mistake in Sam Patch!" And by the waving of handkerchiefs and the huzzas of the company, there was no mistake, for with one assent they exclaimed, "this is the real Sam Patch!" A gentleman present who ascended to the top of the ladder, is of the opinion that but few could imagine or appreciate the sublimity of the scene, without they ascended the ladder, which was rising of two hundred feet. Mr. Patch crossed the gulf in the evening to see his Canadian friends.

A little less than a month afterward, the jumping hero made his last leap, Nov. 23rd, 1829, Genesee Falls, Rochester. The distance was only five feet more than when he made his successful jump above described. The account of Mr. Patch's fatal leap is as follows:

SAM PATCH'S DEATH.
ROCHESTER, Nov. 18, 1829.
Sam Patch is no more! He made his last leap from a scaffold erected on the bank of the falls this afternoon. The staging was elevated twenty-five feet. He sprang fearlessly from it, and descended about one third of the distance as handsomely as he ever did. He then evidently began to droop, his arms extended, and his legs separated, and in this condition he struck the water, and snuk forever! It was a fearful leap and fearfully it was terminated. The prevailing opinion is that he became lifeless ere he reached the water. He had drunk fearfully in the morning, but was not apparently more overcome than he was on Friday last. It was truly a solemn scene, where so many thousands were witnesses to an immolation, which had its origin only in an effort to satisfy the craving appetite of human curiosity. Sam's last request, I understand, was that the funds collected should be sent to his mother, if his adventure should terminate fatally. His body has not yet been found. The height of the Genesee falls from which he jumped, is 100 feet. The staging was twenty-five feet above the falls. The distance which he descended was therefore 125 feet.

Strange rumors were afterward circulated that Sam was alive, having rescued himself behind the sheet of water at the falls until darkness favored his escape. A notice was even posted at the entrance of the Arcade, in Rochester, stating that he would return at a certain time and recount his adventures at Archer's Eagle Tavern. But he never did so. He failed to fulfill the engagement. As an admitting hand-walk out at the time, though the trumpet of fame great Sam Patch recalls.

He has jumped his last jump from Genesee falls!

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.
The National Executive Committee, George T. Downing, President, and F. G. Barbades, Secretary, have issued the following address to the colored people of the United States:

Your national executive committee, created by you in the national convention, assembled Jan. 13, 1869, to urge legislation looking to the educational, material, and political interests of the colored people of the nation, deem that they have at length arrived, in the progress of their efforts, at a probable political consummation of their hopes in so far as the organic law of the Republic is concerned. They revere that desired result in the anticipated amendment to the constitution, which forbids any abridgement of the right of suffrage on account of the race, color, or previous condition of any citizen of the United States. They feel that this amendment should, in the estimation of the colored man, transcend in importance even the revered Declaration of our national independence, inasmuch as it is the practical affirmation of the rights of men, while the other was but the theoretical enunciation thereof. Therefore it has been determined that it is fitting for your committee to advise the general assembling of the colored people of every state and territory through the length and breadth of the land when ever the said fifteenth amendment shall have been officially announced as being ratified, in order to offer up prayer and thanksgiving to Almighty God, and in all proper ways to assure the world of our realization and appreciation of the righteous act of our fellow countrymen in constitutionally securing to us that which has always been our just due, but unjustly withheld.

Your committee does hereby thus advise, and take occasion at the same time to declare in your name that this just act of the American people will be held at its full estimate by those whom it enfranchises; that they will make such use of the right thereby secured to them as shall add to the honor and material interests of the country, and that in possession of this right, along with the others previously secured, they will feel that they really have a country to respect and defend, as well as fellow countrymen toward whom they can cherish the most affectionate regard.

One day, when the seven wise men of Greece were at the Court of Pericles, of Corinth, the question was proposed:

Which is the most popular government?

"That," said Bias, "where the laws have no superior."

"That," said Thales, "where the inhabitants are neither too rich nor too poor."

"That," said Anacharsis, the Scythian, "where dignities are always conferred on the virtuous and never upon the base."

"That," said Cleomas, "where the citizens fear blame more than punishment."

"That," said Chilo, "where the laws are more regarded than the orators."

But Solon's opinion seems to have greatest weight, who said, "where an insult is done to the meanest subject is an insult upon the whole constitution."

"Whose pigs are those, my lad?" "Why they belong to that 'ere big sow." "No, I mean who is their master?" "Why, that little 'un; he's a rare 'un to fight."

The New York Herald says the negro senator from Mississippi will present himself under strong auspices, as he will come representing in himself not only a triumphant issue of republican policy, but he will take with him a strong force of the democratic creed—a memorial for the relief of political disabilities.

"Come to see yer Waz Figgers."—About a quarter of a century ago some genius fixed up a some dozen wax figures—before A. Ward's time—by which he intended to represent the twelve apostles at the time of their last meeting in an upper chamber. While exhibiting these wonders in an Ohio town, and during the warm days of summer, when but a few visitors penetrated the showman's sanctum, an original genius thought he would treat himself to a sight of the noted twelve, quietly entered the hall, when nobody was in, not even the proprietor, but he was near enough to be in observing distance. This visitor approached one of the wax apostles, it may have been Andrew, tendered his admission fee, saying, "Come to see yer wax figgers, here's yer three flip'ny bits"—18 cents in two pieces of silver. The quiet apostle took no heed of his interviewer, whereupon he repeated the same remark two or three times, holding out the change. Becoming a little excited at the indifference of Andrew, the visitor began to curse him, still reiterating his offer of money, and getting out of patience he finally ripped out—"D—n it, aint a po' man's money as good as a rich man's?" Still the apostle heard not, whereupon the visitor showed a volley of curses on the whole show, turned on his heel and left in disgust. To the proprietor who slyly witnessed the whole performance it was worth more than the admission fee, and it was so good that it got into print, and for anything we know the same individual is yet known as waz figgers.

FOR MODERATE DRINKERS AND GREAT EATERS.
A merchant prince of New York—a portly six footer of great manly beauty, who never dined without his brandy and water, nor went to bed without a terrapin or oyster supper, and who was never known to be drunk—died of chronic diarrhoea, a common end of those who are never drunk and never out of liquor. Hall's Journal of Health gives this account of his death.

Months before he died—he was a year in dying—he could eat nothing without distress, and at the death the whole alimentary canal was a mass of disease; in the midst of his millions he died of inanition. That is not half, reader. He had been a steady drinker, a daily drinker for twenty eight years. Scrofula had been eating up one daughter for fifteen years, another in the mad house; the third and fourth were of unearthly beauty, but they blighted, and paled, and faded into heaven we trust—in their sweet teens; another is tottering on the verge of the grave, and only one is left with all the senses and each of them is as weak as water.

The same periodical instances another case that should supplement the one just given: A gentleman of thirty-five was sitting in a chair with no specially critical symptoms present; still he was known to be a dissipated young man. He rose, ran fifty feet, fell down and died. The whole covering of the brain was thickened, its cavities were filled with fluid that did not belong to it, enough to kill half a dozen with apoplexy; a great portion of one lung was in a state of gangrene, and nearly all the other was hardened and useless; blood and yellow matter plastered the inner covering of the lungs, while angry patches of destructive inflammation were scattered along the whole alimentary canal. Why, there was enough of death in that one man's body to have killed forty. The doctor who talks about guzzling liquor every day being healthy, is a perfect disgrace to the medical name, and ought to be turned out to break stones for the term of his natural life, at a shilling a day and find himself.

OUR CHINAMAN.

Amelia says I must say something about our Chinaman, that Mr. J. M. J. Foster engaged for us on his recent visit to California.

This Chinaman came to this village about a week ago, in good order. "The ticket, Mr. Foster & Co., tied to his pigtail, with our street and number on it, was a capital idea. It expedited his delivery, and he was just passed along from one city to another to his right destination.

Amelia Eliza is delighted with him, and she tells all her lady friends that she means to have another like him to do up stairs work."

Of course these ladies were shocked at any such novel institution as a chambermaid. But they all sang another song when she showed them a bed that Chang had made up.

To-day Chang offered to braid her hair for her.

She was a little startled at this proposition, and asked me if she should let him try.

I said, certainly. So Chang came into the setting room and went to work, but the poor fellow had a terrible fright when he discovered that her back hair was an entirely distinct affair from her other scalp covering.

He looked at me as much as to say—"Is this your work? did you pull all this out at the root? Is this the way American gentlemen treat their wives?"

I explained to him that it was not her own hair, but had been purchased down in Newark. That that was the style among all the ladies now.

I am afraid that I was a little hard on the ladies in general. As a washer he's a success on anything but his own hands and face.

He Irons well, but Amelia Eliza had to show him at first.

When she showed him she did as most amateur laundresses do—spit on the iron to see if it be hot enough.

When Chang wants to iron he always comes to her with the same iron to be spit on.

I showed him how to light the fire, using a Tribune to ignite the wood with. I found out afterwards that he hunts all over the house for a Tribune, supposing that I want him to use only that particular newspaper for such purpose.

This incident, I believe, is highly characteristic of the nation he represents.—McGoffin, in Newark Journal.

MARK TWAIN'S HOTEL.

Having lately opened a hushery, I send you these my rules and regulations: This house shall be considered strictly in-temperate.

Persons owing bills for board will be bored for bills. Boarders who do not wish to pay in advance are requested to advance and pay.

Boarders are expected to wait on the colored cooks—for meals. Sheets will be rightly changed once in six months, or more, if necessary.

Double boarders can have two beds with a room in it, or two rooms with a bed in it, as they choose.

Boarders are requested to pull off their boots before retiring, if they can conveniently do so.

Beds with or without bugs. All money and other valuables are to be left in care of the proprietor. This is insisted on, as he will be responsible for no other losses.

Inside matter will not be furnished for editors under any consideration. Relatives coming to make a six months' visit will be welcomed, but when they bring their household furniture, virtue will cease to be a forbearance.

Single men with their families will not be boarded. Beds with or without boards. Dreams will be charged for by the dozen.

Nightmares hired out at reasonable rates. Stone vaults will be furnished to snoring boarders, as the proprietor will in no wise be responsible for the broken tympanums of other cars.

To aid farmers in arriving at accuracy in estimating the amount of land in different fields under cultivation, the following table is given:

6 yards wide by 900 yards long, contains one acre.
10 yards wide by 484 yards long, contains one acre.
20 yards wide by 242 yards long, contains one acre.
40 yards wide by 121 yards long, contains one acre.
80 yards wide by 60 1/2 yards long, contains one acre.
70 yards wide by 69 1/7 yards long, contains one acre.
220 feet wide by 198 feet long, contains one acre.
440 feet wide by 99 feet long, contains one acre.
110 feet wide by 296 feet long contains one acre.
60 feet wide by 726 feet long, contains one acre.
122 feet wide by 383 feet long, contains one acre.
240 feet wide by 181 1/2 feet long, contains one acre.

Conductors on the New Jersey railroads have orders not to eject a passenger, except at the stations.

Observing persons move slow; their heads move alternately from side to side, while they occasionally stop and turn around. Careful persons lift their feet high and place them down quietly by the side of the way.

Calculating persons generally walk with their hands in their pockets and their heads slightly inclined.

Modest persons generally step softly, for fear of being observed.

Timid persons often step off from a sidewalk on meeting another, and always go around a stone instead of stepping over it.

Wide-awake persons "toe out," and have a long swing to their forms, while their hands move about miscellaneously.

Careless persons are forever stubbling their toes.

Lazy persons scrape about loosely with their heels, and are first on one side of the walk, then on the other.

Very strong minded persons have their toes directly in front of them, and have a kind of stamp movement.

A resolution recently adopted by a coterie of young ladies in Tipton, Indiana, would prove a "settler" if adopted by ladies generally. It reads thus:

Whereas, We mean business; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we will not accompany any young man to church or any place of amusement, who uses tobacco in any manner; that we disregard all young men who play billiards or checker, that young men who indulge in profane language need not apply; that we will not by hook, look or crook, notice any young man who indulges in lager beer or whisky, and that we will not harbor young men who keep late hours."

The rum-selling establishments of the land are killing men for gain, as certainly and steadily as if they were absolute retailers of the plague or of pestilential disease. They know that they are killing men. Every glance at the result of their traffic demonstrates terribly the destruction they are making of their neighbors. For what is murder? according to Blackstone, eminent authority, it is "the sacrifice of human life from mere sordid love of gain, supreme selfishness, recklessness, or any wicked state of the heart." Think you, does not the drunkard maker's occupation come within the compass of this definition? Let the grave of the victims, and the sad faces of living survivors, answer.—Era.

A young man while intoxicated, fell into the machinery at the rolling mill at Scranton, Pa. The engineer heard the grinding of the bones, and supposing the cogs were mashed, stopped the engine immediately. As he did so the blood, like fine rain, came drizzling down with little pieces of flesh. The men saw something flying through the air, in which they thought was a cloth from the engine, but which was the unknown being, thrown some forty feet from the wheel, landing on the top of a furnace, where it was found disfigured. The name of the unfortunate young man was James V. Vesey.

A "Hard Times Ball" is to be given in a New England town on the 12th instant. No lady admitted except in calico dress, and gentlemen must appear in course, everyday clothes. The invitations are printed on rough straw paper, and the order of dances is on straw box board.

HOME TESTIMONY.
Mt. Gleed, Morrow Co., O. March, 1859.
Dr. C. W. RORACK—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted during the last six years with general debility—no particular disease, but general prostration. I procured of your agent here, Mr. Enoch Miles, some of your Scandian blood purifier and blood pills, and have been using them during the last four months in this manner: I take the purifier in the morning, and when I feel worse than usual one pill at night, and am in better health at present than for the last six years. I have used various medicines in that time, all to no purpose. I now use the pills in my family, and I think they are the best family medicine I ever used. At W. COOPER.

A profuse and many times excessively offensive discharge from the nose with stopping of the nose at times, impairment of the sense of smell and taste, watering or weak eyes, impaired hearing, irregular appetite, occasional nausea, pressure and pain over the eyes, and at times in the back of the head, occasional chilly sensations, cold feet, and a feeling of lassitude and debility are symptoms which are common to catarrh, yet all of them are not present in every case. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures catarrh in its worst forms and stages. It is pleasant to use, and contains no poisonous or caustic drugs. Sent by mail on receipt of sixty cts. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by most druggists everywhere.

"Whitless's" Dyspepsia Cure does not contain one drop of liquor, and is not a pleasant bitter, but can be relied on for the cure of headache.

Hall's Vegetable Hair Renewer cleans the scalp of dandruff, and allays all unpleasant irritations.

PEABODY'S FUNERAL.—George Peabody was a native of this country. Successful in business he became rich. Wishing to increase in wealth he removed to London, where he accumulated many millions of dollars, all of which the law said was his. But with all this wealth Mr. P. was only mortal, and he died. The English people, or part of them, made a great ado over his death. It was decided that his body should be buried in his native land. The nations interested tried to out rival each other in playing the flunkey to his deceased body. A convoy of vessels was detailed at a vast public expense, just as if one was not large enough for the purpose, to bring one dead body across the Atlantic. Arrived at home immensely expensive sham shows were made previous to burial, and at the funeral. We take it that Mr. Peabody was a sensible, modest man, and perhaps no man would be more disgusted at the doings over his death than himself. Had he been a poor man, no matter how meritorious his life & how grand his philanthropy, there would have been no convey of ships sent to carry his corpse across the wide and deep Atlantic, and no show and shoddy to play the flunkey at his funeral. All this glare and exhibition was brought about only because of Peabody's money—nothing else—so it looks to us. For a republican people to thus fall down and worship the money bags of a man, because he had a larger number of them than his fellow men is not a healthy sign of the times. All this hoarded wealth was but the accumulation of millions of day's work, performed by the laboring man—Mr. Peabody was only the fortunate gatherer of the results of this labor. He was only a business, not a working man.

WOMEN VOTING.—Indications in the papers of late signify very strongly that the woman voting question is making rapid progress. It is even said the Mormons are about to be converted to the faith; and if that is the case, and the Utah women get to voting, be sure that they will be very apt to vote down a monopoly of wives. If Brigham Young gives his lot of wives the privilege of saying who shall be their political rulers they may teach him that he can't be boss over so many of them, and that polygamy will have but a short lease of existence.

It is further said that E. L. McCook, a New Lisbon boy, now governor of Colorado territory, has come out in a message in favor of women's rights to vote. It is a singular coincidence that two boys of Columbiana county, now governors of territories—Gen. Campbell of Wyoming, and Gen. McCook of Colorado—should be so decidedly in favor of women voting. But they are from a county which is not afraid of progress.

This question won't be put down by fawns or frowns. Strong minded women—if you please—and strong minded men, as well, are enlisted in its favor; and they have not gone into the warfare without counting the cost, and they intend battling for nothing less than success. The republican party have been mainly interested in securing the voting power of the colored man, and thus have a claim on his aid to sustain it. They will be very apt to do so, unless that party proves entirely derelict hereafter to all its former professions of equal rights. The sixteenth amendment will soon be another question for action before congress, then state legislatures, and the American people everywhere. Then if the republican party continues true to its professions of equal rights, and is instrumental in securing the proposed amendment to the national constitution, it cannot but secure the support of the voting women of the land. As the democracy is now pretty much no where politically where will it be hereafter when the hundreds of thousands of accessions of colored and women's votes are added to the republican strength?

Considerable agitation was caused a few days ago, in Paris, by M. Rochefort, who was tried and condemned by a French court to fine and imprisonment because he enjoyed the liberty of the press. Mr. R. told the officers if he wanted to take him as prisoner they must come prepared, and expect resistance. His friends collected in large numbers, and erected barricades in certain parts of the city, but all proved of no avail in his behalf, as Napoleon has an army of 100,000 men ready to obey his command, so the prisoner was taken and no disturbance raised, at least no violence followed.

The latest from that part of the world is, that the emperor pretends there is a plot to assassinate him. "Conscience makes cowards of us all," says Caliban, and here is a proof of the remark. Napoleon is a tyrant, and curtails the liberties of Frenchmen all he dares by means of the power he wields. A day of retribution is coming.

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT has been ratified by the following states. There may be some detention in completing and perfecting the amendment on account of alleged informality by the Indiana legislature, and the attempted back action of the New York legislature, otherwise there will be no question. But if the states above named must be left out, Nebraska and Texas are soon to come in, which will make the full number required, in favor of impartial suffrage. Following are the states, and the sides on which they voted:

For the Amendment.
Maine, Michigan, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Connecticut, New York, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, California, Oregon—6.

Against the Amendment.
Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Nebraska, Nevada, Texas—30.

A woman's rights convention, for Ohio, was held at Columbus, commencing on the 10th inst. The proceedings, as reported in a conservative paper, command the respect of all reformers in political matters, and the reporter concedes that the cause has attained a position commensurate with its importance. The action of the convention was dignified, and worthy of imitation by the other sex.

ABOUT EPISCOPACY AND ROMANISM.

As you have, permitted a one-sided statement as to the comparative number who go into the Roman Catholic church, it is but due to all denominations that the estimate should be correct, and the impression just. It would occupy a large space in your paper to give a full history of the individuals mentioned in the article, therefore the false impressions made by it will be shown up in a more summary way.

The first statement of Senex is, "that there are fewer persons reared in the Episcopal church, entering the Roman communion" than from the "churches of the world." Now bear in mind that the Episcopal church is small in comparison with the "churches of the world," numbering, in this country, three or four years ago, 101,498 members, and 1806 ministers; whereas, the regular Baptists at the same time had 984,982 members; the Methodist Episcopal church, (saying nothing about the other branches of the Methodist family) numbered 1,113,341 members, the now United Presbyterian church had at the same time 442,400 members, and 4421 ministers; and now more. Leaving out of view other evangelical churches in this country and the "churches of the world," between which and the Episcopal church the comparison is made, and the Episcopal church dwindles into almost nothing; and yet the writer, Senex, would make the impression that fewer Episcopalians go into the Roman communion than do the other churches in proportion to the numbers in it and the "churches of the world." There are probably 20 to 30 leave it for one that leaves the "churches of the world."

The writer in the Banner of the Cross has not ventured a comparison of the "perverts from the Episcopal church," but speaks of them as educated in "latitudinarian views," as the apology for their going to Rome, and would have us infer that they are not numerous, and says, "it is found that more than nine-tenths come from the dissenting bodies, a large per cent. being Methodists." No data is furnished for this reckless statement, which can only be believed by those who do not know, that for the last 30 years the public prints of England report a continued departure of persons of the Purse-stamp, not only from Oxford but from other parts of the established Episcopal church of England.

Some few upon the continent are named as having become Romanists. That may be, but there are but few Episcopalians there to go to Romanism.

Neither the mention of the names in the article (in which there are some mistakes), nor the general statements, alter the well received fact, that in proportion to the number comprising each denomination of Christians, by far the largest number go from the Episcopal church to Rome, and that, too, of persons born and bred Episcopalians.

Mr. Editor.—Please announce the name of Deterium Tremens as a candidate to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Potts, and oblige.

A MULTITUDE OF VOTERS.

P. S.—If he don't resign and a kuno of any body else that is going to, just let me know first.

D. TREMENS.

Mr. Adam Mong, who met with so severe an accident last week, in having his right arm badly torn by a planing machine, is getting along very well, and although he may not be prepared to work for some time, will soon be able to come out and attend to business.

At the recent election of officers for the I. O. G. T. Lodge of this place the following were chosen: I. S. Crooks, W. C. T. R. Mary Mong, W. V. T. Hattie Humberger, R. S. Solomon, Kridler, F. S. B. Raser, T. Perry Merrill, M. Miss H. Abraham, A. M. Mrs. Rollins, I. G. A. Lee, O. G. Mrs. I. S. Crooks, Chap. Miss Cal. Raser, R. H. S. Mrs. S. Crider, L. H. S.

Mr. A. P. WISEMAN (known as Perry Wiseman) is the man who has an agency for selling those excellent washing machines—not P. A. Wiseman, as was erroneously printed last week.

Mr. N. H. MOGLAN, who has charge of the canal along here, has the water in now, and in readiness for boats for transporting coal. Most of the time it has been unobstructed by ice this winter, and as Mr. H. keeps it in good condition, it is ready for use when required.

CHARLES RUSSELL, we are told, sold one of the finest spans of horses, the other day, to Mr. Miland, an excellent judge of such stock, for $1000. In the matter of horses Massillon is surpassed by few and excelled by still fewer places in the country.

Recent fine days induced some of our people to talk of preparing their gardens for the coming season, especially those who avail themselves of the advantages of hot beds. Along during the winter it is said some of our farmers did plowing.

Monday evening the Davenport Sisters had a public seance in the Opera House, but in consequence of the rain storm, and bad walking not a very full audience was in attendance. The manifestations were those usually exhibited on such occasions, but how the spectators were affected by them, whether for or against, we have not heard. These visitors will probably remain here during the week, but not have any more public seances as we are informed.

Mr. Abraham, an excellent and skillful sign painter, is giving evidence of his good taste and perfection in getting up some beautiful work about the Opera House. Among these proofs of his ability in this art the front of Messrs Williams & Reed's queensware, glassware, &c, store, gives ample testimony. Those substantial and well made bridges just placed over the crossings were manufactured by Clay & Ogden. They are regarded as an improvement in this class of structures and a credit to the firm constructing them.

The Remedy to Cure.

Will all those afflicted with cough or consumption read the following and learn the value of

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM.

WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY.

Amos Woolly, M. D. of Kosciusko county, Indiana, says: "For three years past I have used Allen's Lung Balsam extensively in my practice, and I am satisfied there is no better medicine for lung diseases in use."

Isaac R. Doran, M. D. of Logan Co., Ohio, says: "Allen's Lung Balsam not only sells rapidly, but gives perfect satisfaction in every case within my knowledge. Having confidence in it, and knowing that it possesses valuable medicinal properties, I freely use it in my daily practice, and with unbounded success. As an expectorant it is most certainly far ahead of any preparation I have ever yet known."

Dr. Lloyd, of Ohio, surgeon in the army during the war, from exposure contracted consumption. He says: "I have no hesitation in saying that it was by the use of your Lung Balsam that I am now alive and enjoying health."

Dr. Fletcher, of Missouri, says: "I recommend your Balsam in preference to any other medicine for coughs, and gives satisfaction."

Allen's Lung Balsam is the remedy to cure all Lung and Throat difficulties; it should be thoroughly tested before using any other Balsam. It will cure when all others fail. Directions accompany each bottle. J. N. HARRIS & Co., sole proprietors, Cincinnati, Ohio.

KEEFEY BROS.

Cash—Persons desiring to purchase on late or shorting terms, should have their orders at K. O. Keefe's, for they, for the first time, introduced the well known Willow Bark Cord, having had the reputation of being equal if not superior to that of any other mark in the country. All orders promptly filled. W. O. Keefe.
